

TALES FROM... a house builder

Exclusive regular feature by Roger Perry of Hitchambury Homes

Making a home - how to visualise concepts to benefit the finished house

We have had a good start to the New Year with works progressing ahead of schedule at our development in Ledborough Lane, Beaconsfield. The house is an opulent 4,200 square feet house incorporating a triple aspect 34' drawing room, dining room, study and fabulous 36' kitchen/family room. The first floor accommodation is equally impressive with an indulgent master bedroom suite and three further double bedrooms.

When designing a house we have specific ideas in mind and through our many years of experience it is easy for us to visualise these concepts on plan and how they will affect & benefit the finished house, however we appreciate this is not easy for everyone to do.

Now, with the main structure of the house complete and the internal blockwork walls in place we can walk prospective purchasers round so they can get a real understanding of how generous the room sizes are. It is also easier for us to explain the various unique roof glazing features; how they will throw light into the core of the house, make the kitchen/family room naturally bright even on the dullest of days and when retiring to your master suite after kicking off your clothes under the stars in your dressing room you can indulge with a relaxing soak in your bath whilst watching the clouds float by.

We have also been busy on our other developments with work well underway at Bushnell Place in Maidenhead and the finishing touches being carried out at Woodcote & Cedars in Dorney Wood Road, Burnham where the magnificent showhouse is due to open in early March.

● www.hitchamburyhomes.co.uk

